in the Digital Age:
Focus on Social and Geographical Variation*

Thu. 11th – Sat. 13th April 2019, Bergamo (Italy)

Invited keynote speakers

Wendy Anderson, University of Glasgow

Stefan Dollinger, University of British Columbia

María F. García-Bermejo Giner, University of Salamanca

Susan Rennie, independent scholar (Edinburgh)

Organising committee

Marina Dossena (chair), Stefano Rosso and Polina Shvanyukova

Call for Papers

We invite abstracts for papers on English historical lexicography that pay close attention to the growing number of electronic resources that are currently becoming available in this field. Within this framework, we encourage submissions that focus on social and geographical varieties of English, ideally up to Late Modern times. Papers will be 30 minutes, including 10 minutes for discussion, and we expect to publish a selection of them, following double-blind peer-review. Please note that we do not envisage parallel sessions.

Send abstracts (ca. 400 words excluding references) as Word files to polina.shvanyukova@unibg.it no later than 15 November 2018. Notifications of acceptance will be issued by 15 December 2018.

General information

The event will be held in the Upper Town of Bergamo (www00.unibg.it/maps/mappa_citta_alta.htm).

There is no registration fee, but delegates are invited to make their own travel and accommodation arrangements.

More information will be provided in future circulars and on the conference website at
